

The economy is changing, and that means what employers are seeking in job candidates is changing as well. Many individuals are applying for the same positions as you are, and so it is important to ensure your skills and experiences are presented uniquely. Ensuring your skills and experiences stand out incorporates how you present yourself, methods of communication, and of course, your interview. This section highlights the importance of soft skills, resume and cover letter writing strategies, and preparations for the interview. Each topic is broken down into segments to best aid you in navigating the various aspects of the job search process.